

Color Theme

Prefer a darker screen? Switch Pipeline between Light and Dark to match how you like to work.

Introduction

Some people work better on a dark screen, particularly late in the day or in a room with the lights down. Pipeline comes in Light and Dark, and which one you look at all day is entirely your call.

It's a personal preference rather than a company setting, and it travels with your login, so it holds on every machine you sign in from. Nobody else on the account sees any difference. Two people sitting side by side can have the same transaction open in two different themes.

There's nothing to commit to, either. Switching back takes the same handful of clicks that got you there, so trying Dark for a day and returning to Light costs you nothing. The setting sits with the rest of your personal preferences rather than anywhere in your company's admin area, which is the one thing that catches people out when they go hunting for it.

How It Works

Your theme lives with your personal settings and applies everywhere you use Pipeline.

Light and Dark

Light is the standard bright view. Dark swaps in a darker palette that's easier on the eyes in low light.

It's Yours Alone

Color Theme is per-user, so changing it affects only your own account.
